FILLING SYSTEM

GEA launches ABF 2.0 filling system for shelf-stable, sensitive beverages. 192

The new rotary Aseptic Blow Fill technology from GEA (ABF 2.0) provides beverage manufacturers with maximum hygiene and food safety and top performance in terms of filling speed, accuracy and flexibility. ABF 2.0 is suitable for the filling of shelf-stable, sensitive beverages and milk-based drinks, using H₂O₂ for the sterilization of PET preforms. With the ABF 2.0, GEA has used all its experience to optimize Total Cost of Ownership (TCO) while enhancing the control of key parameters to eliminate any potential risk to the product. The ABF 2.0 can fill a full range of sensitive beverages including still, clear drinks with or without particles, and carbonated drinks – high or low acid ...

Anuga FoodTec 2021

Highly flexible machines ensure individual packing and filling processes in the food and beverage sector . . . 194

The machine manufacturers will show solutions for the ever-complex market demands that result from a wider variety of foodstuffs and individual packing formats under the theme flexibility at Anuga Food-Tec 2021. From the supply and grouping of the products, to the filling, sealing and labelling of cartons, through to the palletising – the food producers can only attain maximum performance and the highest process stability through the complete digitalisation of the machines and robot functions. The modern packing machines that are on display at the fair grounds in Cologne, master the widest variety of ...

COATINGS & SEALINGS

Focus on sustainability. 196

Packaging has become pervasive in our everyday lives. Without it, it would be impossible to transport food and beverages safely. Accordingly, it helps to protect not only products but also resources. At the same time, the topic of food packaging is subject to some very emotional discussions in public with demands for bans or punitive tariffs being voiced at regular intervals. All the more important it is, therefore, for packaging manufacturers to do their bit and give top priority to sustainable action. But the same also applies for consumers who are in fact quite open to such matters, as indicated by the latest studies ...

Tridge reveals the ‘winners’ of stone fruit harvest season 198

Tridge, a global sourcing platform and market intelligence hub for food buyers and suppliers have reported that the US and Turkish cherry market is expected to have a prime harvest season due to optimal growing conditions, whereas Spanish nectarines and Italian apricots are experiencing difficulties as a result of the Covid-19 pandemic. With harvest season commencing for many stone fruits, data collected by Tridge reveals which countries are experiencing highs and lows ...
